Subject: basement hatch

Good afternoon Shari,

I received some additional funding from my father today – if you’d like to bring over some red wine I can cook up some barbequed spare ribs and we can discuss this like mature adults. Shoot – I just realized – the porter still hasn’t repaired my oven!

Another thought...

You can pick out some dates and times that work for you; as long as it’s in the neighborhood and more importantly, only if Mr. Regan and my doctor can string along (for additional surveillance of course). Who signed off on you to stare through my window all day btw? Curious to know, because I did not agree to that at any time – not even in the fine print.

Respectfully,

p.s. Please remind Adnan to keep that basement hatch CLOSED. He can barely understand the difference between a ventilator and a speaker so just take a moment and explain to him it is a serious haphazard. Someone can fall into that hole – if not me at least consider the porters, concierge and construction crews - dare I forget the information technology service providers and all these other strangers who seemingly are walking around the courtyard throughout the day.
